there in 1851. The object of the co-operative or credit banks is to enable labourers to secure the capital required for their operations, unable to give security which they could not otherwise do. Only bona-fide labourers are admitted to the associations. In 1865 there were nine hundred and sixty-one of these credit institutions in Germany. About half of them sent in their statistics to the central bureau, "showing that they then possessed nearly one hundred and seventy thousand members, and that the money which they annually advanced was equal to £10,000,000."

We cannot follow Mr. FAUCETT through the whole of his description of the various phases of the co-operative movement; but we may remark, in concluding, that a perusal of his article leaves a strong impression on the mind that co-operation is destined within a not very distant period to effect a wonderful change in the condition of the working classes in all countries in which its adoption becomes general.

OUR PUBLIC CHARITIES.—A gentleman connected with one of our largest mercantile houses has lately left the colony for a year. On the eve of his departure he left the sum of £100 to be distributed in donations to the following Sydney charities.—The Benevolent Asylum Fund, £100; Visiting Society, Sydney Infirmary, Randwick Hospital Fund, St. Vincent's Hospital, £100 each; To the Clergy Widows and Orphans' Fund, £50; and to the King's School Chapel, £20. In this benevolent spirit Mr. W. O. Grahame has followed the example of his late esteemed father, Mr. John Grahame, who, in 1853, sent £100 to be distributed to the Sydney charities.

Mort, and others to defend discharging wmt of several colliers. Helder and another v. Druitt and others, to settle amount of lease. Edges the Honourable Primary Judge, at 11 a.m. Motions and petitions; Helder and others. Fairburn and others to protest against the release of Gardner.

MELBOURNE.—Thursday.

The dismasted vessel is again off the Otway. There is no doubt, from her signal numbers, that she is the Lich Ard, Captain Robertson from Glasgow.

For New South Wales debtors sellers ask 10%; N. S. W. State Bank shares are inquire for, but none are offered, and orders to buy are difficult to execute.

A drachman, named Bellair, in the Crown Lands office, has been unaccountably missing for several days. His affairs, public and private, are in perfect order.

There was a Chinese disturbance in Little Bourke street last night, and several persons were injured. It commenced in a gambling-house.

A Chinaman named Ah Poon has been arrested at Daysford on a charge of attempting to murder a man named Alexander Oliver.

A stabbing case took place at Footscray, where Margaret Maguire stabbed her paramour, who is missing.

The steamer Williams returned to the Heads last night, unable to find the dismasted ship seen on the Otway. A heavy gale was blowing, and there was a tremendous sea running.

In the Assembly, to-day, the business transacted before the adjournment hour was the election of Mr. Davies as Chairman of Committees, the discussing of preliminary business, and sessional orders. It was also decided to sit only three days a week, but to meet two hours earlier than usual; Wednesdays are appointed for the transaction of private business.

Mr. Grant moved an amendment in the Assembly this afternoon on a paragraph in the Address in reply to His Excellency's Speech. He stated that he would not let the question of revision of the taxation be dealt with until that of Upper House reform had been disposed of. Mr. G. F. Smith seconded the amendment, and contended that the House would be giving up all it had contended for in omitting to deal with the question until that of Council reform had been disposed of. A very good debate ensued, in which all the principal speakers took part. Mr. Laughton said that the Ministry were united thoroughly on the question of tariff reform and adjustment of taxation. The debate was adjourned till Tuesday.

An explosion of lithofracture took place to-day in the North Garden Gully mine. One man was killed and two others were seriously injured.

The drug referred to in previous telegram is being made by Crutch, coach-builder, to the order of Mr. William Hay, M.P., of Boonmanooma.

A sudden death took place in the street to-day. The deceased was a clerk named Isaac Walton.

The chessplayers chosen to engage against the Sydney Chess Club in the annual intercolonial match on Monday are Messrs. Boyce, Fullerton, Hindmarsh, Mann, Scott, Steele, and Tyrrell.

Mr. Ward's no-confidence motion comes on in the Assembly to-day.

SILK SHIRKING.—Messrs. Lancaster have sent for our inspection a new form of silk-shirking. It is one of six which were brought out by the mail, the others being now in the hands of shirkers for their opinions. It seems an efficient implement, and is said to give an unusual advantage over those which are skilfully made with the old shirker. What is most to our interest is the fact that it is close to the latter.

YASS MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.—The ratepayers of Yass have little reason to be satisfied with their municipal government, if the following statements by the Southern Argus are correct:—The ratepayers in Yass are beginning to grumble in terms of their representations, and those they have given to the press are not without merit. There is no chance of saving Mr. Condon's seat at this time. Opened the fire brigade down the Riddell Hotel. A large portion of that extensive building was gutted by great exertion. There was a slight fire between it and Cunningham's Alton Hotel, but the former was a chain of staying the fire. The fire brigade shortly after put it in an open space. 54 tons were dispatched from the mine, leaving 25 cwt. on hand. Number of hands—men employed 56, with four Sydney Tin Co.—Manager reports that, "Last week's yield was 10 cwt."—ton-making the yield for the fortnight was 10 cwt., the quantity of ore hand ready for dispatch four cwt. less 10 cwt. Number of men employed 41, with 10 cwt. added.

Rocky Venture G. M. Co.—Manager reports under date May 15th: "Steeping south of mass underly shaft, raising fair stone. Start crushing at imperial battery on the 26th instant."

Khrionen's G. M. Co.—Under date 26th, May, the mining manager reports as follows:—"In the north shaft we have sunk 34 feet this week, making depth from surface 347 feet; I have down some of the new vein, and prepared it very carefully, but could not get any gold. The vein is very narrow, and the rock is very hard, and very much honeycombed. We also cut a lead coming in from the east, this has now turned and taken an eastern underlay, and appears to be forming a vein about 2 feet in from, that is to the westward of the first vein. It is based in black slate and hard rock, promises to be a good vein. The rock is thick. We have dug 6 feet in the prospecting drive, 188-feet level, cutting a vein about 3 inches thick, but showing no gold."

Carsen and Gould's G. M. Co.—Under date 26th, May, the mining manager reports as follows:—"The shaft is now down 4 feet deeper, we went through 2 feet of slate, and are now in the hard bar again, but expect soon to be fairly through it."

REAL CHARACTER OF THE COMMUNE.

In the Revue des Deux Mondes of the 16th of April last our readers will find a long and interesting article under the heading of "Papiers de la Commune"—extending from page 857 to page 913, in the first volume of the 16th of April, 1871, and reprinted in full. The article to which attention is not directed, divided into three chapters or sections—is written by Henri Baudrillart, and based (as it would seem) principally, if not exclusively, upon a work by M. Dauban, published last year; upon a pamphlet named "Les Clubs Rouges," by M. de Molinari, brought out in the year 1871, and, finally, upon a "L'Avant-Premier," a paper Legislatrice on the Insurrection of the 18th March, 1871, which appeared at Paris, in three octavo volumes. In the year 1872, in this remarkable and ably written article will be found (at page 889) a detail of all these authentic sources from which the writer has derived his information; and in these times, when sympathy has been expressed by some persons for the Communards, with whom Communists who recently escaped from New Zealand, it would be perhaps desirable to call attention to the real character of the Commune, and the terrible principles which it endeavoured to inculcate during its short and terrible reign. Some of the salient passages of the article referred to will serve to show the public how well our neighbours in Noumea—a sample of whom have recently paid us a rather unwelcome visit. The article cited is one of a warning character, and commences as follows:—

"The Commune continues to extend itself in foreign parts, where, prudently, but without keeping itself altogether quiet, those of its chiefs who have escaped the consequences of defeat, have sought and are seeking shelter in foreign lands, and are taking part at once creases, where, perhaps, of all the revolutionaries are unrelaxed, and with publishing manifestoes which allow us to form some conception of the frame which they are preparing for. If we would but believe them, it is in the name of ideas pure and simple that blood has flowed; they invoke the theory of progress. We are favoured with narratives that assume a dramatic air, with episodes sometimes quite affecting, with incidents of heroic self-sacrifice, intentions and of acts, the insurgents have almost always the grand and leading part; whilst our soldiers are treated as demons of assassination, horrid incendiaries, wrecks, and scoundrels. For to such strata are reduced these special pleaders, who strive to lend to their histories—a halo of mystery, and to give them a character that is already of the nature of a legend, a legend military as much as civil, like that of M. Lisegeant, the author of 'Eight Days in May behind the barricades,' who seems to think that he is relating the sublime and terrible defence of Saragosca, or a legend that is in some respects philosophical and humanistic. But the work of M. Malon, author of the 'Third Defeat of the French Proletariat,' Under the pen of the pamphleteer all is justified, glorified, in respect of the terrible excesses which signified the end of the struggle. Assassinations and wholesale acts of incendiarism are spread over these acts, which are boldly acknowledged. Paris burning is a Moscow on fire, a spectacle full of beauty. 'The Seine is on fire, and from its bridges, which stand out in glaring white, we see the river like an immense mirror reflecting its burning magnificence. The angry flames burn to my thoughts, as over Verona, and to say to the conqueror re-entering Paris that he would there no longer find his place, and that the vast monarchial monuments would no longer shelter the monarchy.' The same tint of sublimity is shed over all the men, the forms and deaths of the chief actors become, as it may be, grand as an ancient myth. 'The sun was setting,' says the same story-teller, 'and David (sic) was walking alone, when he saw a man following him by contact with an executioner, who followed, marched steadily on....' Arrived at the barricade, he made his way up over the passing stones. For the last time, his steed faced, set as it were in the midst of his white board, was seen by us turned round, and facing death. 'All at once he disappeared, falling as if struck by a thunderbolt, on the Place Chateaubriand.' It was his reward to die for the revolution, and he died free, on the broad day, at the time he had chosen, and without being wounded by contact with an executioner."

'All at once he disappeared, falling as if struck by a thunderbolt, on the Place Chateaubriand.' It was his reward to die for the revolution, and he died free, on the broad day, at the time he had chosen, and without being wounded by contact with an executioner."

"Arrived at the barricade, he made his way up over the passing stones. For the last time, his steed faced, set as it were in the midst of his white board, was seen by us turned round, and facing death. 'All at once he disappeared, falling as if struck by a thunderbolt, on the Place Chateaubriand.' It was his reward to die for

SPECIAL NOTICE.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY, MONDAY, May 23, 1874.

THE GARANDINI COMPANY will give a

GRAND MORNING CONCERT IN THE EXHIBITION BUILDING, commencing at 8 o'clock; also, in the Evening, commencing at 8 o'clock.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY, THEATRE Royal, York-street.

Happy and pleasant evenings are spent at this Palace of Pleasure, and the greatest glee is afforded nightly by the hundreds who flock to witness the varied entertainments submitted by the great Grand Combination Star Variety Trope, which seems to bewilder and fascinate so much as when the most popular and brilliant stars of the day are exhibited, scenes never likely to wear. The manager's main idea, in which this variable entertainment is kept up, under the experienced management of M. W. C. GALE, for three successive hours, is the most pleasing entertainment in the calendar. The Queen's Birthday is the time when this entertainment is brought to a close, you reluctantly leave the scene of so many hours' pleasure, that you are forced to return again and again your acquaintance with this Palace of Pleasure. Its influences are so great that you cannot resist the temptation of becoming an habitual attendant at this Temple of Novelties.

HARRY SEPTON, Canadian Vocalist and greatest Eclectic Dancer of the day, who has caused so much sensation in London. He will appear daily in the grand matinée of THE DANCING SPIDER.

Miss JESSIE DAUBER, the original Scotch Lassie and Chrysanthemum Dancer.

The world-renowned GEORGE LOYAL, Monarch of the Air.

Mr. MILLAN, Pantomime and Character Dancer, now the most popular and greatest.

Mr. MILLAN, Pantomime and Character Dancer, received nightly with great applause.

Madame ZULLA, Queen of the Air, matchless in her performances.

JULIA VERRILLI, the marvellous, who astounds and amazes nightly.

These trio of Gymnasts, whose performances nightly never fail to win the admiration and applause of their audience.

Mr. HARRISON, Equestrian Vocalist, whose charming conditions nightly fall pleasantly on the ear.

AZELIA, the Flying Lady and Princess of the Star, whose graceful and astonishing gymnastic performances stamp her as one of the most accomplished lady gymnasts of the day.

W. H. HARTRON, the People's Favourite and Charming Baritone.

CHARLIE VERELLI, the Fly-night and Missing Trapzeze.

Walter COOTERILL, Vocalist.

In his plainer characteristic done nightly.

FRANK BROWN, Gentleman Comedian.

The People's Favourite, is to be heard nightly.
